HUSBAND NOTES: Joseph Bagley : Cordwainer

Birth(2): See Source

Travelled(3): There is some suspicion that Joseph stayed in Maine a short while before settling in RI. He had close ties to the Reverend Samuel Moody from York, Maine who had baptised Joseph's daughter at Providence Congregational Church. Also in the diary of Reverend David Benedict, he had a note that Joseph was in Maine.

Court Record(4):

Property(5): Westward of Pawtucket, and also in the northwestern and southeastern directions, at an early period, farms considerably extensive for this part of the country were established, and long occupied by the Scotts, the BAGLEYS, the Comstocks and the Estens. The Scotts were about the pond which still bears their name; and a branch of the family settled on what has long been known as the Adam Anthony farm, on the Old Turnpike to Providence.

THE BAGLEY farm of 300 acres, was below this on the road to Smithfield and Providence. The homestead portion of this farm is now owned by William Higginson of Pawtucket, and is occupied by William Binford. JOSEPH BAGLEY, the first of the name here, and the founder of the establishment, is said to have come from Maine, and built his house in the woods. He was a deacon of the old (Congregational) church at Providence, lately under the care of the late Dr. Hall. From him has descended a numerous race, of this, and other names, now extending to the 8th generation.

Land(14): Roger Williams only 3 acres being an old staunch advocate of freedom was not ambitious of controlling wide domains. The original lot of 60 acres. Three men mentioned in his deed as original owners of it were Ezekiel Holliman, Stuckley Westcott and Gregory Dexter. The 1st 2 were R. W. associates and Dexter came to the settlement later. Later he was a landowner in Smithfield. Joseph Jenks, 60 acres lot was all below Pawtucket Falls to secure water power for his ironworks.

Widow Mary Mowry of Plymouth, son Jonathan Mowry was nearby. The large Comstock farm. Thomas Arnold Farm were south of the above and further south was the Farm of Moses Brown, which carried is to the upper and eastern parts of Providence. Here we find Swan Point Cemetery, westward of Pawtucket and also NW Aden SE directions, at an early period, farms considerably extensive for this part of the country were established and long occupied by the Scotts, the BAGLEY'S, the Comstocks and Estens. On the old turnpike to Providence on the road from Smithfield to Providence the BAGLEY farm of 300 acres, was below this. The homestead portion of this farm was owned by William Higginson in 1866 but occupied by Wm. Binford. JOSEPH BAGLEY the first of this name here was the founder of this establishment. Is said to have come from Maine and built his house in the woods. He was the deacon of the old church in Providence. From him has descended a numerous race, of this, and other names. Now in 1866, extending to the 8th generation

The Comstocks Farm adjoins BAGLEY on the south and was also large. Two small but well cultivated farms on the Wanasquatucket River have been almost created out of barren and neglected portions of the old Comstock farm.

Mineral Springs Turnpike about 1 mile from Pawtucket Bridge. Roger Williams was a frequent guest near the close of his life to the Esten family (next to Bagleys) Esten was from Wales. This is the original home owned by Holliman. The Estens can also trace their pedigree to the Jenks on his mother's side. Esek Esten left many writings, bios, and historical papers that are of great importance.

Birth: New and Complete Gazetteer of the U.S. (1854) p. 961

PROVIDENCE, Rhode Island was settled by Roger Williams in 1635. A local government was organized in 1640, and in 1649 the settlement was incorporated as a town. The first houses were erected near St. John's Church, on what is now North Main Street. A spring in that vicinity still bears the name of the founder, and it is supposed that his remains were interred nearby, though no stone marks his last resting-place. Providence suffered severely during King Philip's war. At one time it was nearly destroyed by fire, and almost entirely deserted of its inhabitants. Since the Revolution, its prosperity, with very slight exceptions, has been interrupted. In wealth and population it has long been the second city in New England. For the last ten years its growth has been remarkably rapid. Population in 1830, 15, 941; 1840, 23,170; 1850, 41,512; and in 1853, about 47,500.

Land: 1733

To all people to whom these presents shall come. Know ye that I, John Arnold Jr., of Smithfield in the county of Prov. in the Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantation in New England, yeoman, for and in consideration of the sum of three pounds of current money of New Eng. to me in hand before the ensealing here of will and truly paid by Samuel Bagley of the town of Smithfield, Cordwainer. Have given, granted, bargained, sold..and conveyed and do freely truly and absolutely give, grant..unto him, ...

One acre of meadow be it more or less, situated in Smithfield and lying adjoining to the other meadow of the said Samuel Bagley and Harris's meadow, lying near to the said Bagley House, butted and bounded as follows..that is to say, beginning at the NE and by Cold Spring Brook.

Dated: 28th of February in the sixth year reign of George the Second, King, (Gode Drilloin amo Domini 1732. In the presence of Lydia Jenks, Wm Jenks John Arnold Jr. filed 23 of Mar 1723.

York. pg. 48- "A happy and hopeful interlude came in 1727, when Parson Samuel Moody of York, Maine, tarried with them awhile. He had visited the little company several times. March 7, 1725, he baptized Elnathan Brown, MARGARET BAGLY (sic), and Mary Calender. Samuel Moody was "so well approved of by the people in general that the Society afterwards sent a messenger to York to treat with him and his people upon the affair of his removal to Providence. But his people could not be persuaded to part with him and he thought he could not be justified in breaking away from them; at the same time they consented that he might go and preach with them at Providence three months, which he did to very great acceptance." These three months were in the summer of 1727, when he baptized nearly a score of Hunters, Smiths, Laurances, Hopkins, Churches, and Potters. Most of these were children, a few adults.
